Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

HERE is a new slant on our progress away from the panic. It is a pamphlet entitled "A Market That Knows No Depression" and is published by one of the paper houses that supplies The Star. It is a study of two men—one in his middle 40's, the other just turned 26. It reminds us of the swift flight of Time. The words follow:

Debt Adjustment Committee Chosen for Hempstead Co.

Five Men Chosen as Arbitrators in Voluntary Adjustment Plan

HEAR BOTH SIDES

County Committee Ready to Receive Requests From Pressed Debtors

Setup of permanent machinery for farm debt adjustment in this county was completed Tuesday with the selection of a county debt adjustment committee to act as arbitrator between distressed farmers and their creditors in preventing unnecessary mortgage foreclosure or allying undue debt pressure.

The committee, named by Dr. M. F. Dickenson, of Little Rock, chairman of the State Agricultural Advisory Board, is as follows:

Hempstead County—J. Mark Jackson, Nashville Rt. 6, S. W. Lane, Nashville Rt. 6, Roy Anderson, Hope, E. M. Osborn, Hope, Hatley White, Hope.

To Pay Expenses

Fast success of voluntary county debt adjustment committees working under the State Agricultural Advisory Board prompted the Resettlement Administration to assume administrative responsibility for and strengthen the work. Committees have heretofore served without remuneration for either time or travel expense. In the future, however, the Resettlement Administration will reimburse members for actual "out of pockets" expenses while engaged in debt adjustment work.

The Regional Debt Adjustment Unit of the Resettlement Administration, headed by A. L. Gabler of Little Rock, is working closely with the State Agricultural Advisory Board in farm debt adjustment work in Arkansas. Field men have been assigned in Arkansas, Mississippi and Louisiana who will do contact and investigation work in the field.

The county committees will be called together twice a month to study cases proposed for settlement, hear both sides of the problems and arrange harmonious settlements where possible.

Sit as Arbitrators

"The county debt adjustment committees and field men find themselves in the unique position of the lawyer who is representing both sides of a lawsuit," said Mr. Gabler in explaining the work. "We are representing the interests of both the creditor and debtor and are trying to work out a sensible solution to the problem that will be more profitable to all concerned."

"We have found that in a surprising number of such cases all that is necessary for a sensible adjustment is to bring the debtor and creditor together before a group of impartial citizens and reason the problem out together."

Mr. Gabler pointed out that debt adjustment work cannot be expected to relieve pressure in cases that are hopelessly involved and beyond solution. However, many farmers who are faced with immediate foreclosure and

Old U. S.-Italian Pact Bars Sanction, Officials Believe

64-Year-Old Document Requires Year's Notice Before Termination

A SECRET CHAMBER

Louisiana Purchase Treaty One of Protocol Room Documents

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Associated Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Resurrection of a 64-year-old treaty at the state department, which might have important bearing on whether the United States legally could, if it desired, embargo raw materials to Italy, has focused attention on a small, dusty chamber of which few in Washington have been aware.

Officially designated as the protocol room, it is the repository for copies of treaties concluded between this and other countries since the foundation of the American republic.

These few yellowing pages of parchment, comprising a treaty of commerce and navigation between the United States and Italy, contain a provision that the treaty shall remain in force one year from the day notice of termination is given by one of the contracting parties. Neither the United States nor Italy has yet given such notice.

It is only one of the priceless documents to be found in this sequestered nook at the state department.

Documents Guarded

The state department watches over these precious treaties with the greatest care. No one except research students ever are admitted to the protocol room, and these only after they have satisfied the custodians they are qualified and previously have examined all printed material on the treaty they wish to study.

The documents are fragile. The diplomatic history of America is contained in them.

There is, for example, the Louisiana Purchase treaty, signed by Napoleon Bonaparte, on parchment enclosed between heavy purple velvet covers. It is sealed by a cord of silk passing through the pages and imbedded at the other end in sealing wax. The whole treaty rests in a circular box of gold which weighs more than one pound.

There is the treaty signed by Queen Victoria shortly after the Civil war, sealed in similar fashion. It, too, is enclosed in a silver box about twice the size of the French one in gold.

The original manuscripts containing ratification of the Constitution are there with their priceless signatures.

May Be Moved

A treaty with 12 Indian tribes signed by George Washington in 1776 is deposited there, as well as the formal request of the King of Burma in 1830 for a treaty with the United States because he feared the growing power of Great Britain.

One of the most interesting is the treaty signed with the Ottoman empire in 1830. It stands three feet high and two feet wide. The text starts far below the center in order that space might be left for Allah to insert anything he pleased.

Eventually these historic documents may be removed from state department to the magnificent new archives building on Pennsylvania avenue, where more adequate and safer space has been provided. However, because many of them are yet being used for

Billions Divided, One Quarter Spent

Virtually All of 4 Billions for Recovery Campaign Is Allocated

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The Treasury reported Monday night that virtually all the $4,000,000,000 work relief fund has been allocated, but only a quarter spent.

The department inserted a new sheet of figures in a routine financial statement which showed $3,700,874,289 allocated by the president on which Treasury warrants have been approved; another $219,733,866 allocated but awaiting warrant approval and $39,391,845 unallocated.

The figures were as of October 31. Payments on the basis of "checks issued," though that date were only $1,100,641,160.

Secretary Morgenthau told a press conference the new figures would be available monthly hereafter in the Treasury condition statement. They will cover the close of the previous month's business.

Thirty thousand letters are mailed from London to Africa via airmail each week. India receives 50,000 from that source during the same period.

Remember the Picture of the Wounded Fawn? He's a Buck Now---But Crippled

Camera Recounts Grim Result of an Unknown Hunter's Carelessness

TWO YEARS LATER

From All Over America Sportsmen Wrote in Asking About Wounded Deer

Two years ago, readers saw in this newspaper a picture which touched more hearts than any photograph which had appeared in years. It depicted a wounded fawn beside its dead mother—an eloquent sermon against the thoughtless cruelty inflicted by careless hunters.

The picture—reprinted upper right just as it appeared two years ago, with the heading and cuttings which accompanied it—struck so deeply into human pity and resentment that it drew a deluge of comment from readers of this newspaper and of other newspapers throughout the United States and Canada to whom the picture was furnished by NEA Service, Inc.

Sportsmen, conservationists, friends of animals everywhere directed attention to the picture for the moral it carried. It was reprinted widely.

Newspapers were flooded with requests for copies of the photo. Hunters severely reprovved they would not be the cause of such a scene—they would look for the antlers before they shot.

And now comes the picture's sequel, the photograph, at the right below, of the wounded fawn—George, he's called—now grown to a 2½-year-old five-point buck, his head lifted proudly, but his left hind leg permanently crippled by the blast from the unknown hunter with the itching trigger-finger.

Mother Shot Down

The story of the fawn's injury and of kind-hearted conservation men's care in nursing the orphan to maturity runs like this:

Two years ago, George was a tiny fawn, soft and spotted, and little larger than a collie dog. He was ambling through the snow-covered pine woods near West Branch, Mich., with his mother, a fine, sleek doe who had always taken good care of her baby.

Without warning, there came a sudden loud crashing sound, and George's mother staggered, fell to her knees, and collapsed in the snow.

Her big eyes, still wide open as she lay there motionless, saw nothing. She was dead.

George couldn't run away. A heavy slug from the hunter's gun had struck him at the joint of the left hind leg. All he could do was drag himself near to his mother's still-warm body and lie there, dumbly suffering.

George was too young to know about hunters and rifles. He could not understand that some hunter, ignoring the law and every rule of the woods, had shot his mother, never looking for the antlers that would have marked his target as a buck, and hence legitimate prey.

Ashamed, frightened, or merely curious? Which of these was the hunter who sneaked away, leaving George by his dead mother's side to starve, or to freeze to death, or be eaten by some other prowling beast?

Rescued by Ranger

Death was hovering very close above George when a state conservation ranger, came along. He snatched the now-famous photograph, then took George away to safety and nursed him slowly back to life and health.

But George couldn't run and soar over fences and creeks like other deer. His left hind leg was pitifully twisted and drawn up by the injury inflicted by the hunter's bullet.

He learned to get about somehow, not with the effortless grace of the other deer, but on three legs, dragging the useless and shattered fourth leg.

Within the Ogemaw Game Refuge, he was safe. The conservation men and the regular hunters learned to know the crippled buck which came down to the feeding grounds morning and evening for corn and ginger.

Blaine Brunna, game-keeper, and his wife made something of a special pet of George.

George Is Safeguarded

Of course, George can't read the signs that mark out the limit of the game refuge. He formed the habit, with other deer, of ranging off the reservation and going to Clear Lake to beg food from cottagers.

That would probably be fatal now, during the hunting season, for George, with his lame leg, wouldn't stand even the chance that other deer have against hunters. So Brunna captured George at the beginning of the hunting

Because a Deer Hunter Failed to Look for Antlers

A scene of wild life tragedy that tears at the heartstrings is this—a doe cold in death, her fawn starving beside her, victims of man's unthinking cruelty. A deer hunter, intent only on prey, ignored the rule of the woods, never to shoot before looking for antlers. He killed the doe and left the fawn, struck in one hind leg by a heavy slug, to starve or fall victim to a prowling beast. A conservation photographer came upon the scene, near West Branch, Mich., rescued the fawn, and it is being nursed back to health.

October Exports of Cotton Show Gain

Recovers Losses Shown by August and September Against Last Year

Exports of American cotton show a gain of 119,000 running bales in October 1935 over the same month in 1934 with the outlook that exports should be somewhat greater for this season than last according to an announcement of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration just received by Frank R. Stanley, county agent.

The seasonal exports tabulated a gain of 62,000 bales, indicating that August and September exports were running behind the same two months of last year. Exports in October 1934 were 592,000 bales; in 1935, 711,000 bales.

W. B. Camp, Assistant Director, Division of Cotton, in explaining reasons for the increase and also in pointing out difficulties in the channels of exporting cotton, said:

"This increase in exports is due in some degree to the change in the U. S. cotton loan policy which has made a larger percentage of American cotton available to world trade. On November 1, but 33,193 bales had gone into the 10-cent loan. The change in loan policy also has brought the price of American cotton more nearly in line with the prices of all foreign cotton."

"Another factor entering into the increase of exports of American cotton was the depletion last year of the foreign supply of American cotton; more was consumed from stocks than was purchased."

"While there are many reasons why foreign countries have not been taking their normal quantity of American cotton, one of the main difficulties has been in the matter of obtaining foreign exchange. This was particularly true of Germany and to some extent of Italy and Poland."

"Of the monetary gold supply of $21,924,000,000 in the world, approximately $9,368,000,000 is held in the United States. This makes it difficult for foreign countries to pay with gold for American cotton, England,

Emperor Goes to Front to Command Ethiopian Armies

Leaves Addis Ababa in Twin-Motored Plane for Secret Landing

WAR-BIRDS STRIKE

Italian Planes Kill 2,000—Mussolini's Son-in-Law Shot Down

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia—(Copyright Associated Press)—Emperor Haile Selassie left Addis Ababa Tuesday by airplane for an unannounced destination.

The emperor traveled in a twin-motored plane, escorted by two smaller planes.

In a last interview before going to join his armies on the battle front Tuesday he told the Associated Press: "The effect of the sanctions imposed Monday against Italy can not be of a decisive character."

By the Associated Press

The application of sanctions against Italy by 51 nations of the world, in accordance with the League of Nations' action, was the signal Tuesday for an Italian aerial attack on the Ethiopian forces on the northern front which fliers said resulted in 2,000 deaths among native warriors.

A squadron of 20 airplanes, led by Mussolini's son-in-law, Count Galeazzo Ciano, engaged in a pitched battle with Haile Selassie's army just south of Makale.

The Ethiopians turned anti-aircraft fire on the machine-gun and bomb attack from overhead, and succeeded in bringing down Count Ciano's plane. He escaped unhurt.

Italy Warns U. S.

ROME, Italy—(AP)—An official government spokesman said Tuesday that the United States can expect no special consideration from Italy if the former adopts further restrictive measures in pursuit of her neutrality policy.

The Italian spokesman said he couldn't state what specific measures Italy would take should the Washington government place an embargo on oil or other commodities which have not yet been restricted from shipment to Italy.

Italians Close In

MAKALE, Ethiopia—(AP)—Two fast-moving Italian columns began an attempt Monday to use a "scissors" action on the wily Ras Seyoum, commander of Ethiopia's Northern army, and to disperse his followers.

Ras Seyoum was reported sounding mobilization drums to gather his men, estimated now at between 20,000 and 30,000.

Among those in pursuit of the former governor of Tigre province is a native Ethiopian called Estocol, which is the popular equivalent in this country of "tough guy." Because of his hatred of Ras Seyoum this village leader came to the Italian lines and asked only a chance to fight his foe.

Scouts said Ras Seyoum had simulated retreat, but in reality was still lurking in the Tembien region and might yet fight the Italians before they reach Amba Alagi.

Columns Marching

Two columns with mounted artillery from Makale and Haussen started marching to the east into the Tembien region.

Gen. Emilio de Bono, who at the age of 70, directed Italian forces in their campaign of conquest, surrendered his command Monday and left for Rome.

The white-bearded little general placed Gen. Melchide Gabba, his chief of staff, in charge. De Bono, upon orders of Premier Mussolini,

Your Health

By Dr. Morris Fishbein

Twenty thousand people die every year in the United States from appendicitis. This rate is gradually increasing. It was 14.4 per cent for every thousand people in 1910, 13.4 in 1920, and 13.1 in 1930.
The average age at which death occurs from appendicitis is 32.4 years.
In contrast to an average age of 35.8 years for tuberculosis, 60.7 years for cancer, and 64.7 years for heart disease, obviously appendicitis takes away human beings at a more productive age than any of the other serious diseases.
Several factors are primarily responsible for this. First, people wait too long to find out what is wrong with them. Second, they postpone getting the operation as long as possible. Third, while they are waiting, they try to get rid of their pains by taking purgatives, or they quiet the pain by taking injections of sedative drugs or morphine. Lastly, some cases are diagnosed too late or a wrong diagnosis is made and the appendix ruptures before the operation can be performed.
The one symptom which is practically always present in appendicitis is pain. If the pain is very severe and the patient should not feel happy about it.

In many instances this is because the appendix has ruptured, and the next occurrence is peritonitis. Peritonitis is an infection and inflammation of the lining of the abdominal walls.
This is a far more serious condition than appendicitis.
Other signs of appendicitis are severe tenderness over the spot where the appendix lies. Doctors also place much weight on the appearance in the blood of an increased number of white blood cells or leukocytes.

In at least 80 per cent of cases of appendicitis, the leukocytes rise from an amount around 7000 for each cubic millimeter of blood to figures like 15, 20,000 or more.

Doctors can point to some interesting statistics showing how life is saved when operation for appendicitis is done early in the attack.
For instance, only 1.3 per cent of patients died in one group when they were operated on during the first day of the attack. This figure moved up to 3.6 per cent of deaths when patients were operated on the second day of the attack; 8.9 per cent died when operated on the third day of the attack, and 12.9 per cent died the fourth day.

Nowadays the surgeon has to use very good judgment in deciding just what to do when he first sees the patient with appendicitis. If the case is an early one, he operates immediately.

If, however, the patient has gone through the worst of the attack and the condition is subsiding, he may wait a little while before operating.
If the patient is exceedingly sick with a secondary peritonitis, the doctor has to make the decision according to exactly what he finds at the time when he sees the patient.

In Philadelphia a campaign of education led to a great lowering of the death rate from appendicitis because people learned never to take a cathartic in the presence of severe pain, particularly when that pain was in the area of the appendix, and because they learned to get the earliest possible medical attention in the presence of these alarming symptoms.

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

Those optimistic folk who still find room to hope that mankind may yet be able to escape blowing itself up with its own instruments of war should give thanks for the existence of that gifted Englishman, H. M. Tomlinson.
I know of no other writer who can check so exactly and persuasively our dire need to put a curb on the great god Mars.

Mr. Tomlinson's newest book is called "Mars His Idiot," and it should be read by everyone who wants to see the race evolve a sane and decent social order.
His point is simply this: that we are rapidly moving toward another war which we dread and hate but whose inevitability we seem ready to accept, and that that war will probably bring our civilization beyond hope of repair.

This, says Mr. Tomlinson, is not news-work; it is perfectly obvious.
The world as a whole, are heading straight for war; the last war nearly killed all of us, its successor will do so most certainly. This breathing space is probably our last chance to save ourselves.

And this, in turn, he points out, is not merely a matter of disarmament by our armaments are made obsolete by our way of living. We abolish war only by abolishing the things that cause war—the sovereignty of great powers, special interests, the

Wrestling Arena Is to Be Heated

Regardless of Weather Building Will Be Comfortable Wednesday

Regardless of weather conditions, the new American Legion wrestling arena at Fair Park will be warm and comfortable Wednesday night. Promoter Bert Mauldin said Tuesday.

Two large barrel heaters are being installed by Cox-Cassidy Foundry. Last week the matches were called off because wrestlers feared that a chilling building would increase their chances for injury.

Tickets for the wrestling match, sponsored by the Hope Boys band, went on sale Tuesday morning. They may be purchased from any member of the band or at Garner's Pressing Parlor, Front street. Part of the proceeds will go to the band uniform fund.

All complimentary tickets have been suspended. Passes given out last week at the arena will not be honored this week, but will be good for next week's matches. Promoter Mauldin said.

A good card is promised. Fred Mor-tastic will meet the Bald Eagle in the first match. Both are new comers.

Billy McEuen meets Owen Davis in the second encounter. Courtesy tickets will be good. The doors open at 7:30 and the first match starts at 8 p. m.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
JEAN DUNN delays her answer when BOBBY WALLACE asks her to marry him. At The Golden Feather Club, she meets SANDY HARKINS whose business connection is vague. Sandy introduces Bobby and Jean to a M. and MRS. LEWIS. Bobby accuses some bonds for Lewis, who says "a lie."

LARRY GLENN, federal agent, is trailing WINNY LEWIS, bank robber. He learns about the bond transaction and questions Bobby. Larry believes the car Lewis bought is armed. Bobby undertakes to find out.

Jean agrees to a secret engagement with Sandy. The bank of which her father is president is robbed, and Larry starts a search for the robbers.

Jean goes to see Sandy who has been injured. He and the Lewises are staying at a farmhouse. She and her father are prisoners. The whole party leaves the farm.

Mervyn's Larry has discovered Jean is with the robbers. He and his men reach the house where they are being held. Larry enters and sees Larry. He calls out and is answered by another Jean.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XLII

WHEN Jean Dunn faints, the last sounds she heard were the ear-splitting noises of a large-scale and sustained gun battle. When she emerged from her stupor, three or four minutes later, the sounds were still in her ears.

She lay on the floor of the bedroom, blinking at the darkness, as her senses returned. Someone had come into her room and was kneeling there, tense and motionless, for a moment; then his trigger finger moved, and the sharp rat-tat-tat of his weapon drowned out all the other noises.

Acrid powder smoke was on her lips and in her eyes, as she lay there dully watching.

The man had stopped firing, and dodged down below the window sill, his bulky weapon clutched in his hands, his muzzle touching her knee. The man blinked and saw her recumbent figure in the dusk.

"Hey!" he said hoarsely. "Who is it?"

Jean made no answer, and the man evidently took it for granted that she had been killed. He wasted no time on vain regrets, but slowly raised himself to peer out of the window. After a long look, he got to his knees again and raised his weapon to shoot; but before he could press the trigger he unexpectedly spun half around, teetered drunkenly on his knees, and then collapsed on his face. The machine gun lay beneath him; Jean found herself stupidly wondering if it wasn't an awfully uncomfortable thing to lie on—until, suddenly, she realized that the man was dead.

WITH this realization the lethargy that had held her seemed to fall away.

She raised herself to her hands and knees, conquering her revul-sion, crawled to where the weapon lay. She wanted a weapon and she meant to have one.

Tugging at his shoulders, she rolled him over. The sub-machine gun lay there, vicious-looking—and she realized, altogether too complicated to do her any good, even if she did take possession of it. Did this man carry a revolver? Jean bent closer. His coat had fallen back, and a shoulder holster was visible under his left armpit. She reached in, pulled out a revolver, and looked at it curiously.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
JEAN DUNN delays her answer when BOBBY WALLACE asks her to marry him. At The Golden Feather Club, she meets SANDY HARKINS whose business connection is vague. Sandy introduces Bobby and Jean to a M. and MRS. LEWIS. Bobby accuses some bonds for Lewis, who says "a lie."

LARRY GLENN, federal agent, is trailing WINNY LEWIS, bank robber. He learns about the bond transaction and questions Bobby. Larry believes the car Lewis bought is armed. Bobby undertakes to find out.

Jean agrees to a secret engagement with Sandy. The bank of which her father is president is robbed, and Larry starts a search for the robbers.

Jean goes to see Sandy who has been injured. He and the Lewises are staying at a farmhouse. She and her father are prisoners. The whole party leaves the farm.

Mervyn's Larry has discovered Jean is with the robbers. He and his men reach the house where they are being held. Larry enters and sees Larry. He calls out and is answered by another Jean.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XLII

WHEN Jean Dunn faints, the last sounds she heard were the ear-splitting noises of a large-scale and sustained gun battle. When she emerged from her stupor, three or four minutes later, the sounds were still in her ears.

She lay on the floor of the bedroom, blinking at the darkness, as her senses returned. Someone had come into her room and was kneeling there, tense and motionless, for a moment; then his trigger finger moved, and the sharp rat-tat-tat of his weapon drowned out all the other noises.

Acrid powder smoke was on her lips and in her eyes, as she lay there dully watching.

The man had stopped firing, and dodged down below the window sill, his bulky weapon clutched in his hands, his muzzle touching her knee. The man blinked and saw her recumbent figure in the dusk.

"Hey!" he said hoarsely. "Who is it?"

Jean made no answer, and the man evidently took it for granted that she had been killed. He wasted no time on vain regrets, but slowly raised himself to peer out of the window. After a long look, he got to his knees again and raised his weapon to shoot; but before he could press the trigger he unexpectedly spun half around, teetered drunkenly on his knees, and then collapsed on his face. The machine gun lay beneath him; Jean found herself stupidly wondering if it wasn't an awfully uncomfortable thing to lie on—until, suddenly, she realized that the man was dead.

WITH this realization the leth-
argy that had held her seemed to fall away.

She raised herself to her hands and knees, conquering her revul-sion, crawled to where the weapon lay. She wanted a weapon and she meant to have one.

Tugging at his shoulders, she rolled him over. The sub-machine gun lay there, vicious-looking—and she realized, altogether too complicated to do her any good, even if she did take possession of it. Did this man carry a revolver? Jean bent closer. His coat had fallen back, and a shoulder holster was visible under his left armpit. She reached in, pulled out a revolver, and looked at it curiously.

There was a momentary lull in the firing; and in the lull Jean heard hurried footsteps coming along the hall. A voice called, "You, Spike, in there—what's the matter!"

She moved before she had time to think—one quick lunge that hid her in the shadows in the corner of the room. The door swung open and someone came in and went to where the dead man lay. Jean could see him squatting down; could hear him mutter something; then she saw him pick up the machine gun and move cautiously toward the window. As he came into the moonlight, she saw his face. It was Red Jackson.

Jean never quite knew, afterward, how she managed to do what she did then. She could only remember raising the heavy revolver, gripping it with both hands, pointing it at the man at the window, shutting her eyes tightly, and squeezing the trigger. Then, for the second time that night, she collapsed in a faint.

WHEN she woke the noise had ceased. She was lying on her back, the lights were on, and someone was bathing her face with a cold cloth. She stirred, blinked a couple of times, and then looked up.

Larry Glenn bent over her, a damp handkerchief in his hand. On the bed beside her he had put an enormous, old-fashioned china washbowl from the stand in the corner; for some reason this was the first thing that caught Jean's attention, and it seemed so utterly ridiculous that she began to laugh.

"Larry, where ever did you get that and what's it for?" she said.

"Well, if you aren't a cool one," he said, gripping her hand. "Here you come through something just one size smaller than the battle of Gettysburg, and you want to know what I'm doing with that washbowl. Listen, Jean, I had to have some water and that was the only container I could find and—"

"All right." She swung her feet down and moved to a sitting position, helped by his arm. She looked up at him, and realization came to her; she was safe, free, rescued!

Then she remembered something else, and looked cautiously toward the window. There was a stain on the carpet there, but nothing else.

"We carried 'em out," said Larry briefly.

"Were they—were they—?" she began.

"One was," he said. "Jackson wasn't. He was lying there unconscious. A bullet had just creased the top of his skull—just enough to put him out cold. You bullet, I think."

He looked at her quizzically. She rubbed her forehead.

"I'm glad I didn't—kill him," she said.

"I was an hour before they were ready to leave. A patrol wagon was backed up against the carriage house to receive the bodies of two gangsters who had been killed in the fighting. Four others, including Red Jackson and Sandy Harkins, had been wounded, were being loaded into another patrol wagon for removal to the prison ward of the Portsmouth hospital—three men, and white-

Hold 28 Clinics for Tuberculosis

8,532 Persons Inspected—Christmas Seal Sale Starts 28th

A total of 8,532 persons attended tuberculosis clinics held in 28 Arkansas counties by the Arkansas Tuberculosis association in conjunction with county medical societies and county health officers from March to November this year. Miss Ede Chambers, executive secretary of the Tuberculosis association announced recently.

Of the total attending, 6,028 were white and 1,804 negro. Chests of 1,414 whites were examined, 77 or 7.9 per cent of whom were positive for tuberculosis, with twenty-two or 4.5 per cent for 481 negroes.

There were 137 whites and 27 negroes classified as suspects on chest examination, bringing the per centage of positives and suspects to 23.6 per cent for whites and 10.2 per cent for negroes.

Skin tests were given 7,066 children, 3,618 of whom were white and 1,408 negroes. Positive reactions to the test were found in 792 white children or a percentage of 14.6 and in 264 negro children, a percentage of 22. Nineteen white children were classified as doubtful cases, Miss Chambers said. Four hundred sixty-six did not report for having the test read.

Following the clinics, information was sent to each parent whose child had reacted to the tuberculin test and all records of physical examinations were placed in the hands of the family physician and the county health nurse for aid in handling the case.

Tuberculin was furnished to the county health officers by the Tuberculosis association for the testing of approximately 15,000 children.

Counties served by this program were:

Grant, Faulkner, Randolph, Benton, Phillips, Lafayette, Arkansas, Woodruff, Crawford, Hot Springs, Boone, Baxter, Franklin, Washington, Carroll, Clark, Green, Monroe, Garland, Desha, Clay, Lawrence, Chicot, White, Columbia, St. Francis, Pope, Jackson.

"At the request of the Arkansas Health Department, the association answered a questionnaire for the American Medical association which required as complete a state survey as was possible under present reporting conditions in the state," Miss Cham-

Washington Wins Over Emmet, 27-15

Basketball Season in Hempstead County Opened Last Week-End

Washington High School basketball team won the opening game of the season Saturday with a 27-15 victory over Emmet High School. The game was played at Washington.

The Washington team was paced by Captain Lester Watkins who scored 15 points. Leonard Bearden, a team-mate, rang up nine points. This ses-sons said.

"A total of 3,567 cases of tuberculosis were located in Arkansas over a six months period. County units, county nurses, the state sanatorium, the FERA and local tuberculosis associations assisted in the survey. No figures on cases under exclusive care of family physicians were procured, nor were those under county health supervision in 23 counties. FERA records were most helpful, more than 1,000 diagnosed cases being found on relief rolls in the state."

The annual Christmas Seal Campaign sponsored by the Arkansas Tuberculosis Association will open Thanksgiving day and continue through Christmas. Funds derived from sale of the tiny seals are used to hold clinics, test children, and prevent further spread of tuberculosis in Arkansas. Former Judge C. F. Newton is chairman for the 1935 Seal Sale campaign.

Billy Evans Quits as Cleveland Pilot

Salary Cut to One Third Despite First-Division Record of Indians

CLEVELAND, Ohio.—(AP)—William G. Billy Evans, general manager of the Cleveland Indians for eight years, resigned Monday.

Alva Bradley, president of the Cleveland Baseball company announced the resignation and said it had been accepted with regret. Bradley also said the office of general manager was being discontinued and that C. C. Slapnicka, chief scout for the Indians for 14 years, had been appointed assistant to the president.

Evans said that acceptance of his resignation was "as much a surprise to me as to anyone. He said his salary was reduced from $30,000 a year to $12,500 a year at the end of the 1933 season, with a bonus of five per cent of club profits, providing they reached $100,000.

In 1934, Evans said, profits just reached this mark and they were about $75,000 this year under the same arrangement. He said the contract offered for 1935 called for less than $12,500.

With the exception of Willis Hudlin, pitcher, the entire Cleveland team was brought together by Evans, the retiring manager said. He said Hal Trosky, the slugging first baseman, Joe Vossick, Lou Berger, Roy Hughes and Bill Knickerbocker, all were brought up from the minors without cost to the club. The Indians have finished in the first division of the American League for the last seven years.

Franco-Italian Trade Ends
PARIS, France.—(AP)—Officials of the Foreign Office admitted Monday Premier Laval's efforts to end the Italo-Ethiopian war are "absolutely at a standstill."

Sanctions and counter-sanctions closed the Franco-Italian frontier. Huge stocks of merchandise, blocked by the economic siege, piled up on the border. Italians, turning back French goods, including newspapers, at the border.

The French Chamber of Commerce said sanctions would have a "disastrous" effect and would increase unemployment in this country. Authorities said railroads would lose 50,000,000 francs ($3,300,000) a year.

Italian tourists arrived on the French Riviera were reported to have fallen to half of the daily 200 average.

The price of vegetables rose at Menton, one of the first effects of sanctions when trucks of Italian gardeners failed to cross the frontier. Italian tourist traffic ceased.

for instance, has $1,555,000,000 of gold and Germany $38,000,000.

"Foreign countries owe the United States, including war debts, more than $20,000,000,000, which decreases their ability to get exchange to purchase American cotton, and the discontinuance of the policy of lending money to foreign countries to purchase American cotton further decreases their ability to buy it.

"The continuance of the United States policy of refusal to accept goods in payment for cotton adds another difficulty. The tariff wall is so high that it makes it impossible for foreign countries to exchange goods for cotton."

Turkey Production

rated to be 33 per cent below last year in turkey turnout.

Long time records indicate some 80 per cent of all Uncle Sam's turkeys are raised west of the Mississippi river—a long way from their earliest home in New England, a home made precarious by the blunderbusses of the early settlers seeking Thanksgiving fare two centuries ago. Today this formerly wild bird is raised in some sections on a gigantic scale, some western farms having flocks numbering more than 5,000. The south central states lead all the rest in production, followed closely by the far western and west north central areas.

Prices Higher
Government officials decline to make estimates as to percentage production by sections, but unofficial computations from official figures give the south central area about 28 per cent of all production, roughly 20 per cent to the far western and north central sections, and the other 20 per cent well scattered over the country.

Along with the relative shortage this year in supply, came higher turkey prices. Farm prices for October, the latest available, were about 16 cents a pound, against 12.7 cents at the same time in 1934. Not even chickens—the usual Thanksgiving substitute in many a family unable to buy the traditional bird—are plentiful. Marketings have been unusually low.

A recent survey indicates that 220 cities in the United States with populations of 10,000 or more are adjacent to adequate water landing areas and could greatly benefit by marine air facilities.

Romance Again Fails Clark Gable

Another romance has ended for Clark Gable. A happy holidaying pair were the film idol and his second wife, Rheta Lachman Lucas Gable, when photographed here, but now comes the curt announcement that they have separated and a property settlement has been arranged. The couple were married in 1931, two weeks after Gable was divorced by Josephine Dillon. The present Mrs. Gable, 11 years her mate's senior, was a wealthy Texas widow, mother of two children by her first marriage.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

By Rodney Dutcher

WASHINGTON.—Most of the smart boys, some of whom have inside information, are betting that the wet-dry issue will rise from its grave and enter the presidential campaign.

Drys polled 312,000 votes in Kentucky the other day. Politicians can't ignore a showing such as that.

Even though the wets did carry respect by 110,000, the existence of strong dry minorities in many states is indicated and there's some evidence of a certain reaction against conditions under repeal.

In a presidential election otherwise fairly close, concerted dry support for one candidate might easily decide the result. You would have to assume, of course that it wouldn't be offset by a swing of wets to the other candidate, since any wet candidate would win on a straight wet-dry fight.

The strategy of politicians now is to make liquor a collateral issue which can be used to their side's advantage.

Democratic strategists, who have their eyes closed on Governor Landon of Kansas, have been thinking that Landon's dry record was his chief liability. But they also figure that Landon may be smart enough to make an asset out of it.

If he were to utter a cry for "temperance," attack conditions since repeal, inferentially blame them on the Roosevelt administration, and demand reform, he might become a hero of the dries without alienating many wets.

So convinced are some advisers that Landon will try something of the sort that Roosevelt has been urged to take the "temperance" issue to his own bosom before someone else grabs it. Don't be surprised at some effort along that line.

Can This Be Gratitude?
Surprise, not to say indignation, was registered here when Rudolf S. Hecht, retiring president of the American Bankers Association, urged before the association's convention immediate steps to take the government out of "the many fields of business activity in which it has become engaged," with special reference to banking and credit.

It happens to be known here that the RFC bailed out Mr. Hecht's bank, the Hibernia National of New Orleans, to the tune of millions of dollars, and reorganized it, after it had closed.

The question is raised whether the bank has paid off the RFC and thus far no one is heard answering that it has.

Although Mr. Hecht, who used to be president of Hibernia, was moved to the bank's chairmanship while RFC put in its own agent as president, it is still felt that he has bitten a feeding hand.

RFC was left holding the bag for nearly a million when the Union Indemnity Co., of which Hecht was a director, failed early in 1933, soon after Hecht—who was also chairman of the New Orleans RFC advisory committee—had lobbied through an additional $970,000 RFC loan for Union Indemnity, most of which sum, according to undenied charges by Congressman Hamilton Fish, was used to pay off indebtedness to Hecht's bank.

This Farley's Big Guy
One characteristic of Postmaster General Jim Farley's celebrated green ink is the fact that it fades.

Various documents in Jim's department which have been exposed to light considerably show virtually indistinguishable gray marks in the space for his signature while other handwriting, in black ink, stands out clearly.

Also, your correspondent recently jotted down the signs painted on office corridors in the corridor leading from the forest of pillars and panelings surrounding Farley's office. In succeeding Secretary of the Postmaster General, Stenographers to the Postmaster General, Mail Room of the Postmaster General, Clerks to the Executive Assistant to the Postmaster General, Special Assistant to the Postmaster General, Administrative Assistant to the Postmaster General.

About that time you begin to suspect that the P. M. G. is a pretty important guy. Then you trudge down corridors of first assistant P. M. G.'s, deputy second assistant P. M. G.'s, assistant deputy fourth assistant P. M. G.'s and so on until you just go plumb dizzy.

Winter Proofing of Car Necessary

Semi-Annual Checkup Advised Now by Magnolia Petroleum Company

DALLAS, Texas.—Profiting from the experience of large fleet operators, automobile owners are rapidly learning that a semi-annual checkup of their cars is the best insurance that they can buy against cold weather damage and expense, Fred M. Lege, Jr., vice president, said in announcing the annual "Winter-Proof" campaign of the Magnolia Petroleum company.

Thrifty Americans have learned that it is good business to carry insurances that protect them against damage to their persons and their homes," Mr. Lege said. "They insure their automobiles against fire and theft, and often against damage from accident—and now they realize that it is equally as essential to 'insure' an automobile against the ravages of weather and wear by protecting the engine, the body, the cooling system and other vital parts by means of two semi-annual check-ups—one in the Spring and one in the Fall.

In response to this demand for motor vehicle protection, Magnolia dealers and stations provide what has become popularly known as "Winter-Proof" service. This service, originated by Magnolia several years ago, has been growing in favor each fall as car owners learn that it is cheaper to "insure" than to wait and pay a repair bill later.

"Magnolia's 'Winter-Proof' check-up covers seven vital points, the engine, transmission, differential, chassis, fuel, radiator and battery. Dirty summer lubricants are replaced with clean, fresh Mobiloil and Mobilgreases of the correct winter grade recommended by the manufacturer of the motor vehicle."

Children's Colds Should Have This Safe Treatment

Young Mothers Benefit from Two Generations' Proof of This External Treatment For Fighting Colds.

IT AVOIDS CONSTANT "DOSING"

There's nothing like a child's cold to upset a young mother. And mothers of two generations, anxious to help and avoid "dosing" their children, have depended on Vicks VapoRub. It is effective—external and safe. It avoids the risks of constant "dosing," so often upsetting to children's delicate digestions.

Just rubbed on throat and chest at bedtime, VapoRub acts two ways at once:

1. By stimulation through the skin, like a poultice or plaster.
2. By inhalation of its penetrating medicated vapors, released by body heat and breathed in direct to inflamed air-passages.

Continuing through the night, this combined vapor-poultice action loosens phlegm—soothes irritated membranes—eases difficult breathing—helps break congestion.

A Practical Guide for Mothers
Each year, more and more families are being helped to fewer colds and shorter colds by Vicks Plan for Better Control of Colds. Vicks Plan has been clinically tested by practicing physicians, and further proved in everyday home use by millions. Full details of the Plan in each package of Vicks VapoRub.
